

COMMISSION SHIFT RAILROAD COMMISSION VOTER GUIDE

What is the Railroad Commission responsible for?

The Railroad Commission of Texas (RRC) is the regulatory agency that oversees oil and gas development, coal and uranium mining, and gas utility service in Texas. The RRC's decisions affect every Texan in some way, whether you live next to oil and gas development or pay a gas utility bill. Its mission is to serve Texans through stewardship of natural resources and the environment, concern for personal and community safety of enhanced development and economic vitality for the benefit of Texans.

Members of the three-person commission are elected statewide, not regionally. One seat is up for election every two years, in even-numbered years. Commissioners serve staggered six-year terms, and there is no limit to the number of terms a commissioner can serve.

Additional comments/notes:

This voters guide is presented by Commission Shift, a Texas-based 501(c)(3) nonprofit dedicated to reforming oil and gas oversight. We educate and organize a wide array of Texans to build support for changes at the Railroad Commission that improve the agency's function, transparency, and accountability to the many people and places impacted by the oil and gas industry. Commission Shift maintains a nonpartisan stance and refrains from endorsing or opposing any political party or candidate. Our primary objective is to inform and equip the public with resources essential for informed participation in the forthcoming elections.
